People in their prime

Through One Titan's Eyes

*My pride is not blind
for this I can see.
This school is you
And all you can be.
Together we gather
From day to day
To learn a new trait
That someday will pay.*

*So keep your head up
In the halls and in class
And look to the eyes
Of the people you pass,
Cause these are our people
They're our generation;
Look towards them
To find motivation.*

Working Hard for

Ainlay students aren't dumb. We know when to work, and we know when to quit, and now is the time to work.

There is no definite for anything in life; even the strictest of schedules is only a product of human intelligence and humans are neither known for their precision nor for their perfection. Nothing is ever set in stone. When things are so consistently undefined, life and planning are made rather difficult. And it is only those individuals who possess a certain something in the way of intellect who can determine what tasks are at hand, and when they are to be completed. Ainlay students seem to possess this something. Obviously not all students are incredibly intelligent, and there are, of course, the odd few who are undeniably DUMB, but at least they aren't representative of the mass majority.

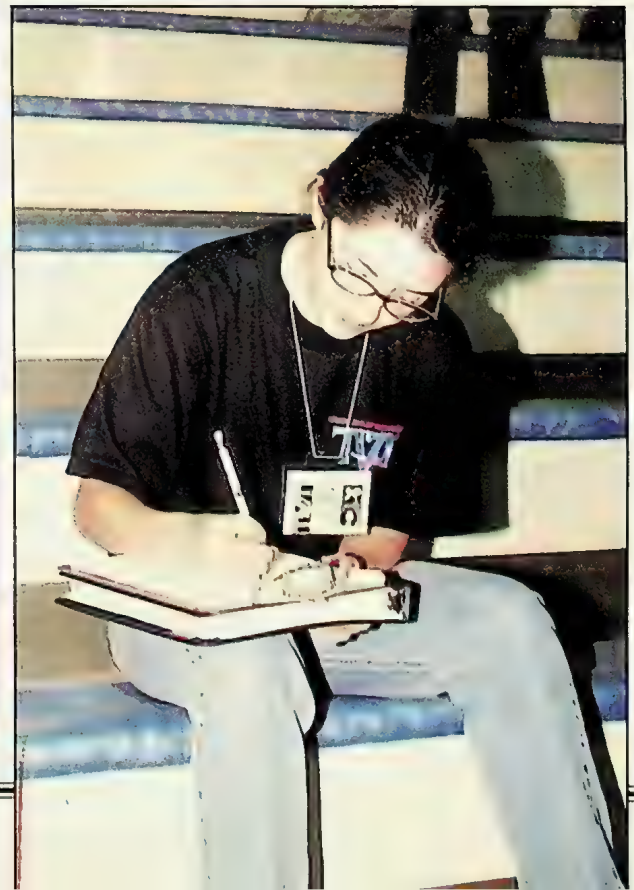

The Secret of our Success.

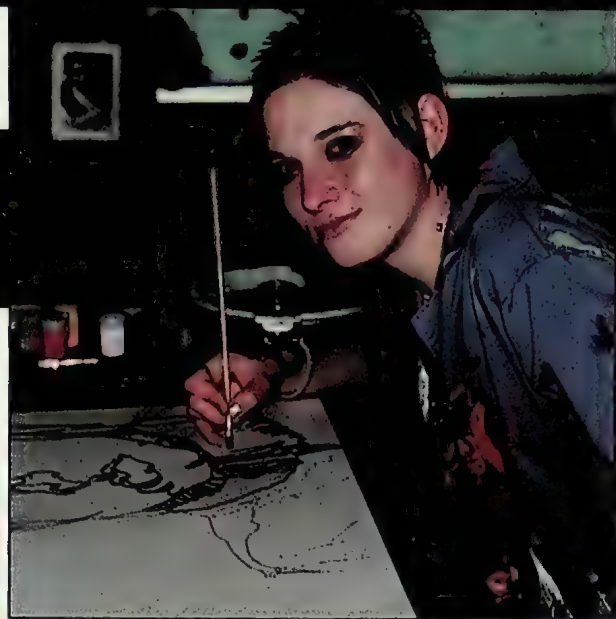

Ainlay students; given that the population is, on the whole, relatively intelligent; can run the school as well as their lives, with ease. Success follows as a result. Were the school actually filled with idiots, the difference would be remarkable. The disorganization would be unbearable, and the stupidity would flow freely through the halls. The entire institution would be in a state of anarchy (not to put down anarchy as a political system or anything, well.... actually...yes, it is a bad system) And it all happened because some lousy students couldn't get their acts together and work. Working is an important part of life no matter what certain individuals may believe. It provides us with a kind of purpose, and with something to take up those long empty moments of the day otherwise be filled by television; not to mention the fact that work enables us to be fed, to wear clothes, and to buy those very same televisions which eventually consume us. School is supposedly the basis of this working world, and it (hopefully) teaches the principles, skills, and knowledge that we require for our work till a ripe old age.

Now is the time for work.

High School.....the final stage before we are forced to enter the pitiful existence into which our parents once entered, backward and barefoot. This is a different age now, and a different generation of youth; eager to face the world. There is no more need to be backwards. Today's students, wanting desperately to differentiate themselves from their parents, walk into the world prepared (not to mention fully clothed.) The reason for their preparedness is their deeply ingrained work ethic. And guess where they learned it. Surprise! It was school! Those who deem school "the root of all evil" are now be proven wrong, and are doomed to work till they die. Too bad they'll already be doing that, curse or not.

...Success

This the page known as the food page is now known as the page formerly known as the food page. This is due to the fact that there is a lack of food on the page so as you can see it would be pointless to have a title talking about food. Because of a lack of time (actually a bit of lazyness) we are limited as to the amount of photos we have on hand. However, I am sure that the selection we now have will be adequate. So enjoy yourself while you look at this page.

MM MMMM GOOD!

The not so lonely ones

Loneliness is Bad?

Loneliness is bad. At least that's what we're told. It all depends on how you look at things, and that all depends on how you were taught. It's no coincidence then, that we were all taught that it's better to have friends than to face the world alone. This is in some respects the truth, but there are exceptions to every rule (or non-rule.) Why else would anyone willingly become a hermit, or a recluse, if not to be alone? They must appreciate the world vastly more as a solitary figure to have chosen that life, and they were daring enough not to conform to the norms. But who can really judge? Who can make a legitimate decision regarding this "thing" that they have never in their lives experienced. Everyone believes that they have experienced at least periods of unbelievable loneliness, yet can one ever truly be alone in this society? There is always someone waiting to call on the phone, or someone standing on the doorstep selling the magazines. There are always people in the street, or at school, or at work, or at home. Even if there is no emotional connection between them, there are still individuals present, and therefore they are not alone.

Even those in remote areas cannot be utterly alone. They are physically "alone", yet they most likely they have emotional links to people outside of wherever they happen to be, and are therefore not alone. Even lacking all outside connections, the little forest organisms prove that there is no such thing as "alone". No one can actually say that, by camping, they have cut off all human relations, nor have they been able to detach themselves from their natural place in the workings of the universe. The truth is that we can never really be alone. No matter how much we would like to be, there is always someone there, looking over your shoulder, or lending a hand. There is always someone to spill cornflakes on you, or to help wipe them up. People are everywhere regardless of whether we can see them or not. They take up space in places which we fancy ourselves being. They eat our food, and they steal our friends. They spread rumours, and they spit on the sidewalk. They forget to wear deodorant, and they deplete our supply of air freshener. The other people then take these negative experiences, and convert them into hate and disgust with the human race. Their wish becomes to condemn and punish. They feel the need to be alone, forgetting that they are themselves a part of that same race which they condemn. How can they criticize without first looking inward? It would seem that some individuals are so intensely focussed on the faults of others, that they become blind to their own. They look at humanity as a whole rather than at the individuals that make the group. They overlook the subtleties of relationships; the joy and the humour and the fun of a good friend.

It is our nature to be critical of the things we don't understand. Some can't understand loneliness, just as others can find no use for companionship. There may be good points on either side of the argument, yet no matter what is said, it's just not natural to be alone!

Staff

Harry Ainlay Administration

Principal's Message

While action and achievement are typical of Ainlay in any school year, these attributes certainly typified 1997-98. From stellar achievement in academics, fine arts, athletics, career and technology studies, and leadership development, to extra curricular and service activities, this school is second to none. But, the contributions of each year are unique. The personalities of students and staff in concert with the opportunities presented set a script that is ever varied and ever exciting. No two years are exactly alike, and this book chronicles a segment of our lives that we shared together at Harry Ainlay. This shared experience is now an indelible part of our common heritage.

As you look through this book in years to come, may it evoke memories of a time when we all shared work, play, happiness, challenge and fulfillment as we worked to complete your secondary school experience. It has been our pleasure and satisfaction as a staff to work with you in crafting the "Ainlay Experience, 1997-98."

Congratulations and thank you to the editors, advisors, and the tireless yearbook workers who devoted countless hours of dedicated effort to creating this record of a year in our lives. You have given us a marvellous gift.

May you always read this book with fondness and in happy times.

Sincerely,
M. Demaine, Principal

Staff and Students

Harry Ainlay is simply a brick building with classrooms, textbooks and equipment inside. Walk into the school on Saturday morning and it's but a physical entity without a soul.

The soul of Harry Ainlay is made up of the people who work and live within the concrete walls. Add over 2,000 students and 150 teaching, support and custodial staff, and the school becomes a dynamic environment. Look through the eyes of the Titans. Look at teachers. Look at students. Look at students and teachers working together. Now we have soul.

Grade 10 is always a time of change and excitement for students arriving from Junior High. Harry Ainlay seems so big! Where is my locker? How do you find the various classrooms? Where is the cafeteria? What is all this talk about credits? What are semestered and unsemestered classes? What is CTS, LOTE, IB, etc.? Where is the cafeteria? In short order however, everyone settles in and the vitality that new students bring with them is great! Teams, clubs and athletics take on new members. The senior students lend a helping hand. The spirit of Ainlay lives on 'Through Titan Eyes.'

Thriller

A first account of Ainlay through the eyes of Melissa Liaw and others who experience this for the first time.

Remember the thrill of walking into the school for the very first time, bright-eyed and innocent? Well, I do. I take a few steps into Ainlay, attempting to differentiate my locker from the many others. Milling around the dim hallways are bounds of people: Chinese, Hispanics, German, Indian, and many others. To add to my confusion and amazement, the halls seem like a neverending maze. Yet, from beneath the floors, doors and walls, there is an everflowing radiation of spirit and liveliness. All of a sudden, the bell rings sharply and feet scurry hurriedly across the floor.

I stand alone, the halls are empty, but for some reason, I feel elated. Deep down inside, I know I've made the right choice. That is, McNally, Wagner, Page - none of the other schools could possibly compete with what Ainlay has. I'm on my way off to find my first class on the first day of the rest of my life.

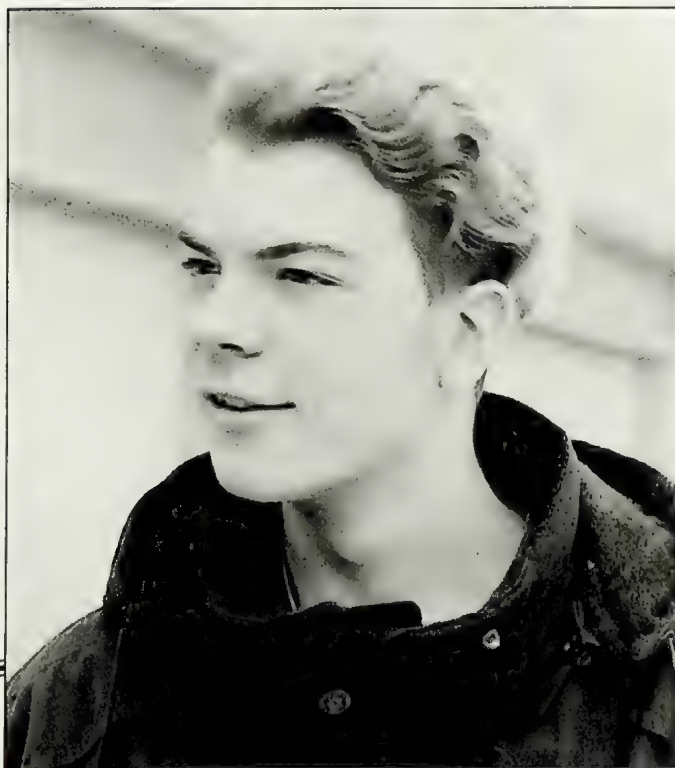

Grade X1 is a time to solidify friendships and give serious reflection to courses being taken. In one more year, graduation arrives and post-secondary decisions are necessary. This is a great year! Titan eyes see friends, friends, and more friends.

The strength of Harry Ainlay is shown in many ways. One way is the strength of the curricular programs offered. With a student population of about 2,100, the school can offer a diversity of courses smaller schools could only imagine. In addition to a full core program, the school prides itself with a strong IB course of studies. Thirteen Career and Technology courses are also available. A very strong Fine Arts program consisting of Drama, Music and Art is provided. Students are able to select programs that meet their individual interests and post secondary aspirations. The pages which follow will capture some of this curricular diversity.

Career and Technology Studies courses at Harry Ainlay offer students a multitude of exciting courses in thirteen different program areas. All courses have a heavy emphasis on working in activity settings. Modern facilities are provided to support new initiatives that reflect what is happening in the world of work. State of the art computers exist in most program areas.

An increasing emphasis is being placed on linking the courses to businesses in the community. This is very apparent in such courses as Automotives, Cosmetology, Communication Technology, Design Studies, Foods, and Information Processing.

Courses are taught on a modular basis and many students complete 4 and 6 credits in a traditional 3-5 time frame.

Want an exciting complimentary course that can give you daily life skills and possibly some direction in your future? Give CTS a try!

Career and Technology Studies

Career and Technology Studies Week

Harry Ainlay experienced the first CTS week ever held in the school. The event ran from March 16-20 and provided fun and excitement for everyone at Ainlay. Over thirty businesses participated in the event in such ways as providing guest speakers and allowing access to their establishments by students.

Rotunda activities included computer makeup demonstrations, nail driving contests, studio photography demonstrations, post secondary displays, and tire rotation drills. Staff from KISN radio provided informative DJ support for noon activities. Channel A television brought in a Hummer vehicle for students to admire. Stambaugh Photographics and Brighton Photographics set up a photo studio and photographed several students who had facial and hair styles completed in Cosmetology. This business support was much appreciated by everyone.

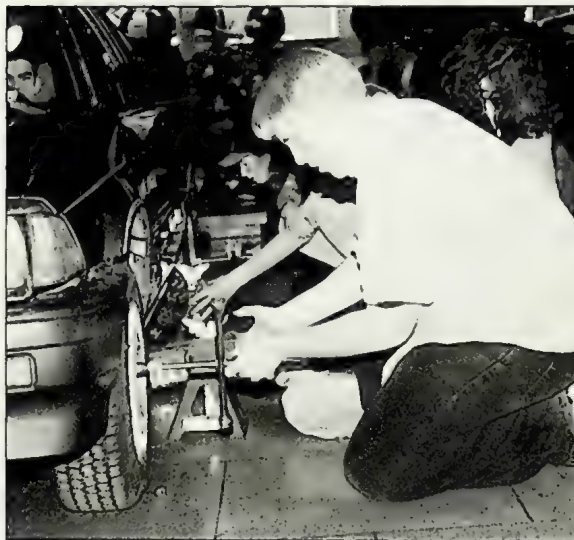

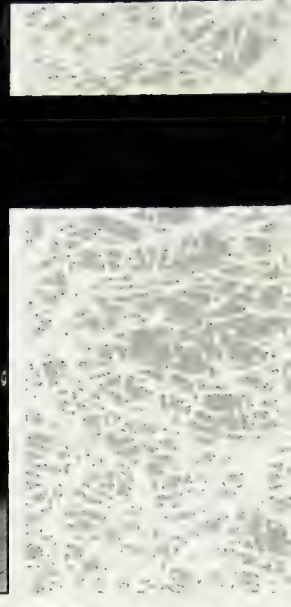

Guest speakers came into Communication Technology, Foods, and Information Processing classes. Speakers talked to students about technology, public companies, the stock market, apprenticeship and the Registered Apprenticeship Program.

Poetry for the depressed IB.

*I feel sick.
I need to go to school.
I had a headache.
I went to school.
I thought my head
was going to fall
off.
My brain size is disproportionate to my body.
A grasshopper fell
on me.
I was not afraid.
I dissected it.
Yesterday I
analyzed the script
for "TITANIC",
There was no
school that day.
I didn't know what else to do.
My life is a book.*

The Wonders of IB

The Frightening Truth Behind the Academic Facade.

International Baccalaureate. To some, the phrase translates into: "Hell on Earth"-----the academic slavery of millions (well not really millions). It has a kind of ring to the name which makes it seem either a worldwide crime syndicate, or simply an incredibly pretentious title for an education system. As it turns out, it's both. The IB people, "Pushers" as they are referred to, try to force their torturous system on unsuspecting intelligentsia. They want to lure the general public into the belief that the rigorous academic training, and mental abuse are all part of the positive learning experience, and the suffering is for the betterment of our education. Bah! we say! Our incredible intellect helps us see past their facade of good will. We can no longer accept their ways and the ways of others like them. Our minds and bodies can no longer suffer the "slings" and "arrows" of classroom interrogation, the "spears" of examination, and the "big pointy sticks" of essay writing. We have toiled long enough, and it is time to revolt! Let us rise up in revolution!.....They can be our masters no longer. It is time to rule ourselves! Their fascist propaganda can no longer be tolerated. We must return in kind, the punishment with which we have been inflicted. We have long been the victims of conspiracy, we students of the IB program. They try to control our minds, and thoughts ... Aaaaaaaahhhhhh.....

We apologize profusely for the rantings of the last disturbed individual, and we, as the leaders of the International Baccalaureate program hope that your minds have not been contaminated by these untruths. The personage responsible for these unscrupulous rumours is an unstable character, and as a result of his last outbreak has been institutionalized. (Actually we've had him killed, but don't tell anyone.) The IB program is really a system aimed at the enlightenment of young minds, and at their future preparedness for University studies. It is offered in over 800 select schools in the world (We must ask you, if the program were so evil, would it still be so widespread---- We think not!) It is not a punishment for students, and the decisions for their entrance into the fold were made entirely on their own accord (though a certain amount of coaxing was necessary,----it wasn't like we beat them up or anything.)

".....the rigorous academic training and mental abuse are all part of the positive learning experience, and the suffering is for the benefit of our education."

The truth is that IB is a privilege, and that the students graduating from it receive a large number of the available entrance scholarships, bursaries, teaching assistantships, and are accepted into limited enrollment facilities in greater numbers than those having not taken the program, and any of the setbacks, such as no longer being capable of the utilization of small words, are only minor concerns. The truth is that the vast majority of our students truly value and appreciate the experience of their studies with us, no matter what message they may choose to convey to others. (We know. We can read minds.)

Students enjoying their luxurious stay in the acclaimed "Hotel International Baccalaureate"; the non-existent institution which we occasionally like to escape to as we tread hopelessly through the day-to-day drudgery of IB-life. We have no real escape.

Second Languages Week

The 13th annual Second Languages Week was held on February 23-25 to promote and celebrate the learning of a second language. These languages include French, German, Japanese, and Spanish.

On the first day it was Japanese Day. On this day there was dancing and martial arts demonstrations in the gym. This was so successful that there were even visitors coming from Red Deer. In the cafeteria, sushi and chicken yakatori were served. The next day was German Day. In the rotunda Schuhplattling dancers entertained the lunch hour crowd. The cafeteria staff served delicious German food.

Finally, there was French & Spanish day. First there was French-Canadian dancing, then came the breaking of Pinatas, an exciting event. Food served in the cafeteria included poutine, stuffed chicken crepes and plantain.

And if that is not enough, there were contests. Some contests included a speech contest in French, a poster contest for grade 10 students to promote this event, and trivia contests open to anyone, on the countries where the four languages are spoken.

Second Languages Week was very successful. Before everyone had a chance to get the food, it was all sold out. Rotunda activities as well were successful. There was lots of fun because of audience participation. Hopefully, however, it is your turn to decide if you would like to learn a second language.

Core - Science,

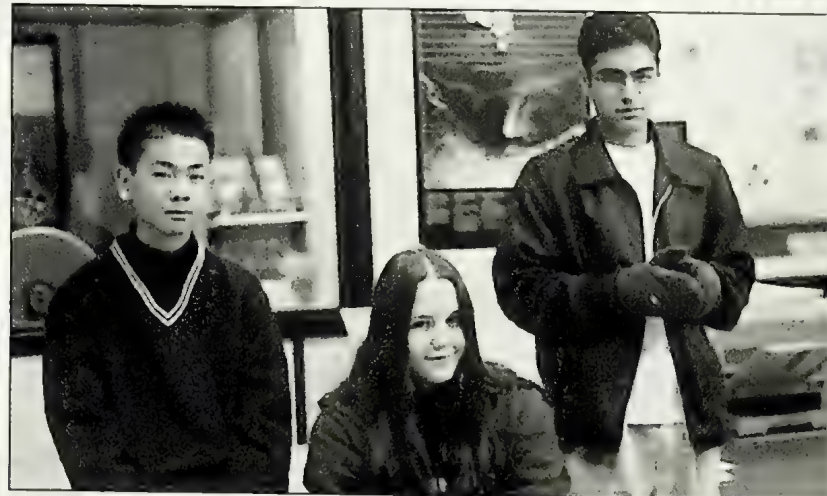

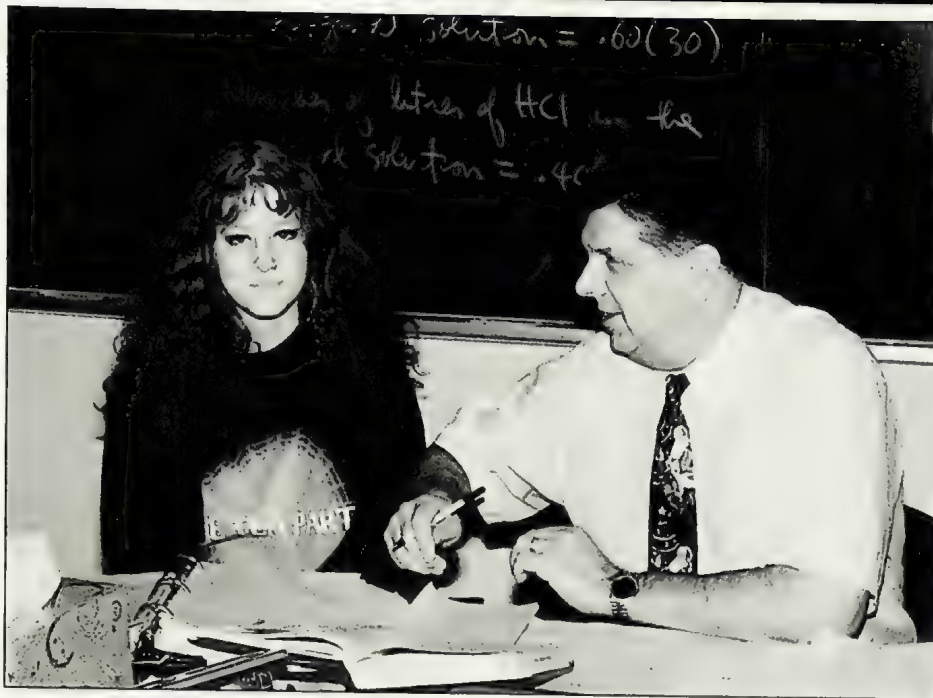

Core subjects are mandatory for your diploma. You must get a pre determined number of credits in all core subjects which include Science, Math, Social Studies and English. Students decide which stream within each subject they want to take. This all depends on what you want after high school and the marks you receive coming into high school.

For those who enjoy school, the core subjects are quite enjoyable. As can be seen in these pictures, most of the people are having a good time. With core subjects, you start in either the 10, 13, or 14 level classes. The 10 level is the normal path for most students, though 13 and 14 are for students who struggle in a particular area. The sequence continues with 20, 23, 24 being grade 11 and 30, 33, 34 being grade 12. Then there are always the advanced level classes which are referred to as IB classes, however they are explained in another section of the book. Regardless of who you are, core subjects are the most important part of your high school education.

Fine Arts - Visual Stimuli For the Masses

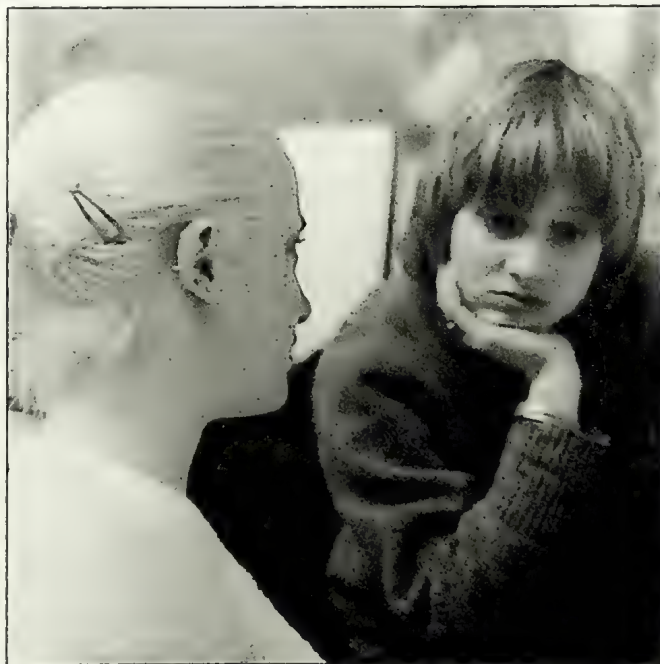

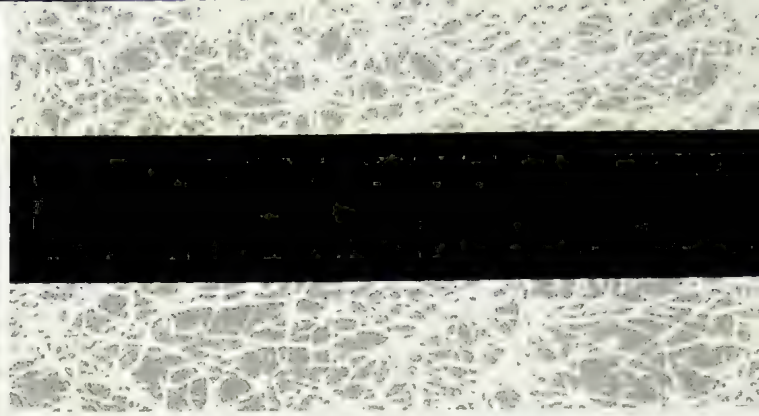

The 1997-98 school year was one of success and innovation for the Harry Ainlay Art Department. We participated in numerous shows and exhibitions, and many of our past and present students were honored for their creative abilities. We started the year with an art show at City Hall, and later continued with a demonstration and art display held at Southgate Center during Education Week. Two more student art exhibitions spanned the year at the Harry Ainlay Art Gallery, and the school session concluded with a successful presentation of the I.B. Graduation Show and Reception. Nicole Burisch, Caitlin Wells, Max Liboiron, Anna Migaj, Tianna Mapstone, Albert Shi and Stacey Smyth all participated in this show and completed their I.B. Art Diploma.

Harry Ainlay students John McDonald, Albert Shi, Elan Hannah, Kari Bailey, Jae-Hong Ahn, Nick Rudnicki, and Lan Yao were all honored with high profile displays, scholarships, or awards throughout the year. Lan Yao also received the award and scholarship as the top art student within the Edmonton Public School System. The year was again highlighted by the concentrated efforts of the participants involved within the Fine Arts program and the Special Projects courses. The efforts of Mr. Dan Miller and ALL of our art students distinguishes Harry Ainlay with one of the most prominent art departments within the Edmonton school system, and completes yet another successful year.

Clubs

The Muse. One might think that this is a club filled with over-stuffed, high-bred "gentlemen" and "women". Au contraire! It is actually a union of about fifteen people, varying from ones with strong artistic backgrounds to those who couldn't paint or write if their lives depended on it. They meet once a week on Fridays, in their four main committees: Judging, Typing, Layout, and Publicity. Each year, their goal is to put out a great publication, which is in reality a compilation of student art, whether it be a painting, poetry, prose, or what not. Thus, they hold contests throughout the year, with prizes of $10 - $20. This is meant to gather all of the best pieces of student work, and to reward the "impoverished" artists. This magazine comes out in the spring, around May or June. However, one would be correct in saying that the best thing about this club is that they enjoy each other's company, while bringing out the best of their abilities. Their intent of expressing the artistic side of Harry Ainlay is well within reach!

Amnesty International

It is better to light a candle than to curse the darkness". Amnesty International is an independant, worldwide movement of human rights activists. Our activities focus on the release of prisoners of conscience, a situation where someones's fundamental, civil, and political rights have been violated. Amnesty activists are made up of people like you or me -just someone with a big heart and is doing something about it. Together, we number well over one million people around the world.

This organization has found a home at Ainlay, where we ran awareness campaigns such as the "Carnations for Peace" petitions, or when Mr. Powell was thrown in "jail" with his saxophone earlier this year. Presentations to grade 10 classes as well as our letter writing campaigns continued throughout the year.

Our rewards are personal, but this year, the citation from city hall was a nice bonus!

Much thanks goes out to the members of Amnesty, and especially to Mrs. Newbold, our "mother hen" and guiding light.

Max Liboiron

Dead Artists Society

Dead Artist's Society. A unique name for a group of dedicated and hard-working people determined to accomplish their goal of producing an anime. This way, they will open doors and provide opportunities for art-related and writing-related fields. It also allows people the chance to do something that only a few have a chance to do.

The Dead Artist's Society came into being last year. It was begun by a former art teacher of Harry Ainlay by the name of Mr. Witschl. At least twice a week, they meet at noon in room 513. A small number of people have already combined their efforts to draw preliminary sketches of the main characters which will be used to produce a 30 minute long animation. This will be accomplished by using computer graphics and hopefully will be finished by June 1999. They are in the midst of completing their script and story boards. Interested members are more than welcome to take part, especially any teacher advisors willing to provide support. They need people who have knowledge on the procedures of computer animation, access to animation programs and possible sources of funding. They plan to submit the final product to a local amateur film. Please help these dedicated people to see through with their goal.

Ping Pong Club

The Ping Pong Club is a group of students who spend their lunch hour on Thursdays playing ping pong. This is a club for avid ping pong players to challenge each other, or just a place where beginners can learn from the masters. That's what this club is all about, having fun and learning this magnificent sport. Anyway, that's what they do, they play ping pong and that's it.

The Computer Club had a very successful year under the guidance and direction of the club board of directors. Club members had opportunities to develop skills in web page design and development using HTML, create 3D worlds using VRML, advance their programming abilities using C++ and be exposed to new emerging software and hardware technologies. The club attended the University of Alberta Computing Science Open House and received excellent information about post secondary opportunities in the field of computing science. They also gained hands-on experience with many of the research projects underway at the university.

Through Titan Eyes

Math Club

During the year, the Math Club's student members gathered to share their common interest and talent in mathematics. Every Tuesday at lunch, they met in Mr. Lindenberg's room to learn how to solve math problems, or even to write math contests. Anyone can join this club. All you need is an interest in solving problems involving mathematics, a willingness to share your interest and talents with others, and the determination to solve difficult problems.

Like past years, Harry Ainlay's Math Club has participated in every high school mathematics competition in Alberta, and even in some national competitions. As always, Ainlay has achieved high scores in all of the contests. Way to go, Ainlay!

Candis Haak and Mr. Lindenberg are going over some problems in preparation for her next unit test in Math 30.

Pottery Club

This was an excellent year for the pottery club. With our new kiln we were able to make and test many new glazes. Members also worked on throwing and hand building techniques, and helped with making glazes and firing their pieces. We also completed several successful raw firings.

We did demonstrations at Southgate in November and for the Open House in March.

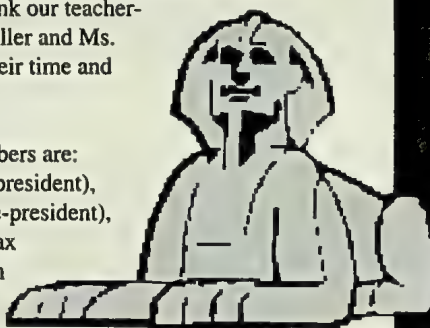

In May, three of our members attended the 1998 Fireworks Ceramics conference and had the chance to attend demonstrations and lectures.

Overall we had a very successful year and we would like to thank our teacher-sponsors, Mr. Miller and Ms. Cowan, for all their time and effort.

This year's members are:

Nicole Burisch (president),
Sam Welov (vice-president),
Mel Chonelo, Max
Libairon, Morgan
Wesley, Glen
Sergey, Anne
Lissina, Colleen Shaw,
Megan Bertagnolli, Stacey Smyth, Dominika
Warchol, Iren K., Linda Chan, Jessica So,

Slavov, Nicole Pakan, and Aaron Morrish.

P.A.L.S.

PALS gathers students from all over the world, during the meeting every Tuesday and Wednesday. You can meet people from Australia, Germany, Finland, Japan, Mexico, South Africa, Taiwan, India, and many more countries. We celebrate different cultural festivals such as Scandinavian Halloween, Ukrainian Christmas and Chinese New Year. We also watch movies and videos to learn the different cultures not only in different areas, but also in different era. Moreover, we have the highlight country of the month. Each month, we have a special presentation on one country. We learn about the climate, traditions, values and political and educational system in the country. We have a world events contest school-wide and provide the opportunity to watch the Tri-Prov basketball tournament. Sometimes we just relax, play games and chat. (After all, PAL's main purpose is to help the ESL and international exchange students to get use to this new country and show our Canadian spirit.) Come join us as a global citizen and enrich our multiculture tradition.

Speech and Debate Club

Before, you flip to another page with some athletic teams, allow me to introduce you to the Debate Team and Club. Amidst all the athletic teams and organizations (TVT, etc.), there is a group that similarly trains to be more competitive and become the best. However, our "faster" and "stronger" is in an intellectual sense, rather than physical meat. The Debate Club meets once a week where both impromptu and prepared resolutions are debated, in two styles: parliamentary and cross-ex. Both styles are controlled arguments but one allows for a more confrontational in a more court room situation. Then as tournaments arise, we separate into pairs to form teams which compete. At tournaments we must be prepared to debate both the affirmative side and the negative side of the issue, and it is each team for themselves. The ranking of teams becomes based the number of wins and speaker points awarded to the individuals of that team. Therefore, it is both an individual and team effort and a debater who does not listen to his partner easily loses. The ranking of a school is not evaluated but by looking at the number of teams from a school in the top positions we can judge how strong of a debating powerhouse the school is. Each year we participate in OSA's and Churchill's and the hugo Cup.

lives for is the cold gratification of watching the opposing case crumble due to hypocrisy or pure incompetence. The self-confidence and challenging and objecting attitude is a permanent mark of a debater.

Debating is a life skill, and many people, upon graduating to university join the teams and clubs there, as it is a defining aspect of an individual. The moment a debater here's the real story.

How does the Yearbook really manage to cram these pages with such a useless array of information?

Ok

Yearbook people are insane. We all run around yelling at each other and chopping the heads off chickens. Our fetishes probably extend from childhood mishaps, and our parents lack of respect or support for our particular talents and interests such as camel breeding, and growing industrial hemp. It's always the parents fault, or at least that's what the therapist keeps telling me. Never is there a problem in this world that does not somehow stem back to inefficient parenting.

All our bizarre group tendencies have roots in our respective parental figures and their behaviours, at the time that we were impressionable youths. My particular interest in professional turnip wrestling is a result of my parents lack of acknowledgment, on one occasion when I'd had my hair done. Their comments on the purple weave were less than complimentary, which forced me to pursue emotional serenity through the wrestling of vegetables. It was just because I was so darn good at it that I began to do it professionally.

Some of the others have bizarre fetishes with dead rodents. While once entering the forbidden area of the Com-Tec room, I came upon one of my colleagues in the throes of the dissection of a large orange rat. At first I was only surprised at the colour and size of the enormous rodent; apparently the student had utilised a concentrated solution to chemically dye the organism simply because he enjoyed the colour orange much more than the bleak grays of the rat in its natural state. Then I became shocked when I realized exactly what had been taking place. As the diagrams and charts and surgical tools lay on the ground before me, it occurred to me that he had been conducting secret experiments in his back lab, on the resistance of rats to human disease, as well as on their affinity to the colour orange. It turned out that he had really been making progress in the field of immunology, but since he was only a student, he had never been taken seriously, and so out of spite for the scientific world, he simply took to dyeing his lab rats orange and ceased his ground-breaking research. He attributed his love of the dead animals to his experiences as a child, and particularly to his having been cut from the soccer team while in tenth grade. Instead of his generally healthy habit of kicking things, he began to take on a new persona of a mad scientist type, and against all good taste, he took photos of his clandestine and rat-esque patients and it was this photography which landed him a job in the Harry Ainlay Yearbook. It was actually very good photography despite its disturbing nature.

The other eccentricities of club members are too involved and numerous to be discussed in a great amount of depth, and we must, due to impending legal repercussions decline to describe such things as the co-editor's knife throwing habit, or his tendencies to set fire to parked cars (moving cars if he's feeling ambitious). The astonishing thing is that this group of excessively bizarre individuals has even managed to unite themselves in the same school, let alone participate in the same club. Some may the Yearbook club, and if we had paid attention to the thoughts and opinions of others, we would have never produced a yearbook. ψ

The REAL Yearbook!

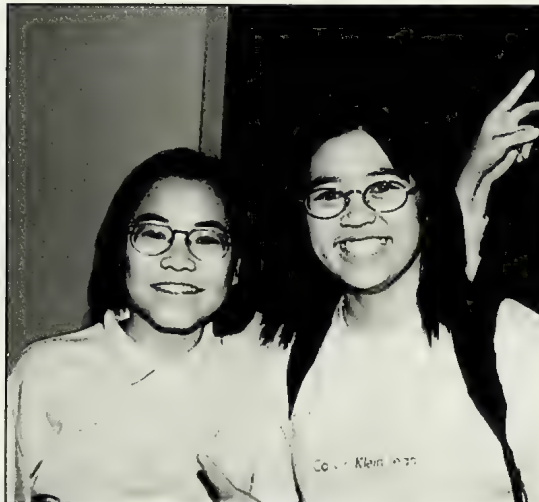

Well, that story on the other page isn't exactly all true. Actually none of it's true, but you have probably already figured that out. Our role in the yearbook is not to cut the heads off chickens or to yell at each other in a less than sane fashion. We actually do a whole lot of work to get this yearbook done on time. As you can probably see, this book is pretty thick, as far as yearbooks go, and that means that it has taken months of "hard labour" to take all the photos, do all the write-ups, and make the layouts which make this such an excellent book. So many people have made such huge contributions to our publication that we could not possibly thank them all in this one measly paragraph, however there are some who cannot go without special thanks. We would like to extend a huge thanks to Mr. Povaschuk himself for taking on the responsibility of being our staff coordinator and the virtual ruler of our yearbook clan. Thanks to Aisha Yahya for taking on the entire grade 12 section of the book, and to Tara Grayson for her handling the whole grad and commencement section. Thanks also to Ms. Sands for typing in all the grad quotes, Ms. Jewell for coordinating the "Skills Canada" team in which Sarah Lai and Rick Povaschuk participated, and to Ms. Nikolai without whose help Rick and I wouldn't have been able to attend the session on "Journalism and Communications" in the "Encounters with Canada" program in Ottawa this year. And a final thanks to all the teachers and staff of the yearbook who contributed immensely to our success. ♡

Japan Festival

Nihon matsuri ni youkoso! Welcome to the Festival of Japan! At the end of February during Second Languages Week, Harry Ainlay hosts the Festival of Japan. Guests invited to this half day event include representatives from the Japanese Consulate, speakers from the U of A, cultural performers and of course students from high schools all around Edmonton, St. Albert and Red Deer who take Japanese as a second language. These students are introduced to many aspects of the Japanese culture through traditional dancing, koto music performances, martial arts demonstrations and a fashion show.

Festival of Japan is held to provide and promote cultural diversity and also gives students an opportunity to experience a bit of the Japanese.

Origami Club

Origami is a Japanese word meaning "folding paper". It is a Japanese craft that most Japanese children learn with their parents and grandparents during their leisure time at home. Paper is folded into various shapes such as animals, birds, flowers, etc, without using scissors or glue. The most famous one is the crane. One thousand origami cranes are considered to be very special good luck charms. There are new trends in Origami which incorporate mathematics and computers to create new folding patterns for totally unusual objects. Our Origami Club meets on Mondays during lunch hours.

Scuba Club

The Scuba Club had a very successful year. We were in a rebuilding phase of the club this year with 15 new members. Mr. Lawlor and Ms. Boos were the staff advisors for the club. Through several fundraising activities, like bottle drives and selling meat products, the club members were able to participate in a "Discover Scuba" program, Open Water Certification classes & pool sessions, a dive in the West Edmonton Mall lake and a dive trip to Jasper, Alberta to complete their PADI Open Water Certification. Many of the students are looking forward to next year and a trip to warmer waters. Others are planning to complete advanced training to further develop their skills. The club has also designed a new display window and is working on making the much needed changes.

Science Olympics

On February 28, 1998, eighteen Edmonton high schools battled it out at the 1998 Edmonton Science Olympics held at the Shaw Conference Centre, and of course, Ainlay achieved nothing but excellence. The team of Gemma Mio, Alex Yui, Roseanne Yeung, Bob Lutz, Dejan Gajanovic, and Leon Yu (alternate) brought home a gold medal in the individual mystery event, "Taste Test", and third place overall in the competition. As well, the team was presented with an invitation to the 1998 APEGGA Summit Awards.

Prior to the day of competition, the team put in an enormous amount of time preparing their individual events. These events included a professionally designed catapult that would eventually launch a hacky-sack distances of ten and eighteen metres, and a sail car that would make its way around two fans placed at right angles. How did they fare? Well, lets just say that the sail car moved and the catapult shot. It is important to note, however, that this year's Science Olympics produced three catapults and three sail cars from three separate teams. Unfortunately, Ainlay could only send one team to the competition, and as a result, an intraschool competition was held and the winning team represented Ainlay. In any event, the hard work and dedication of all of Ainlay's teams was essential fo the school's success at the competition. Most definitely, the team would not have finished where it did without the immense support and advice of the team's coaches, Ms. Fischer, Mr. Shaw, and Mr. Kennedy. Thumbs up to the coaches!

The Mountain Biking Club exists to encourage the sport of mountain biking. The Mountain bike club also brings students who enjoy the sport, together, so that they can enhance their skills or teach others what they have learned. Members watch videos, discuss bike safety, and share experiences they have had on the trails around Edmonton and in our provincial parks. Guest speakers are often invited to demonstrate bike maintenance and answer equipment questions. As a group, the Mountain Biking Club has gone on bike rides to such places as Terwillegar Park. The Members frequently organize group rides and go out on trails almost every weekend.

Future Investors...

Wilfred Laurier University has offered stockmarket simulations and competitions since 1968. Thousands of Canadian students have taken the opportunity to learn about investing in a fun, hands-on way. Students learn about investing by investing simulated money, but using real world data. Students choose what to trade using the information provided and then send their trade requests to the WLU Competition computer on a daily basis. Return Trade reports are prepared the next business day and sent back to the students. Weekly Portfolio and Ranking Reports are provided to indicate a team's current portfolio value as well as their regional and national ranking status.

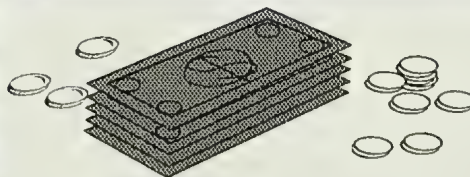

The simulation lasts approximately four months. For each team there is one National award as well as a number of regional Awards. The Regional Awards include cash rewards and certificates for the top three teams and a school trophy for the first place team. Harry Ainlay registered ten teams in the competition with excellent results. the top three teams in Alberta Region were all from Harry Ainlay. Vinay Gidwaney recieved first place, Andrew Baboneau, Tracy Lim-Fong, and Peggy Sah recieved second place, and Travis Holownia recieved third place.

The Titanic Newspaper

The Ship Has Sailed

Extensive studies have shown that if you take one of our professional quality, 8-page, power-packed newspapers and place it in water, well, it's going to sink. Despite this unfortunate law of nature, the Titanic Newspaper has not only kept afloat but has gone full speed ahead during the 1997-98 school year.

The Titanic Newspaper has been dedicated to reaching out to the student body. It is a medium through which the "mere mortals" and common folk of Ainlay can express their ideas, their opinions, their achievements. Even the journalistically-challenged can get involved. We encourage everyone to write, draw or take photographs for the Titanic because it is Harry Ainlay's student newspaper, a representation of what the youth of our school care about.

Though we didn't win any Oscars (despite having received several nominations...) we put out four issues packed with humour, controversy, current affairs, movie and theatre reviews, student activities, comics, horoscopes and much more. All of this has been the result of much hard work and cooperation by the newspaper staff. Nineteen-ninety-seven-ninety-eight marked a whole new look for the Titanic with new ideals and new features. The most infamous of these is probably the Top 10 column, wherein lay-Titans could express their views on pressing issues such as reasons why our prison—ahem, school—has no windows, to which pick-up lines to use when wooing the opposite sex. Also, the new

"Titanic's Valentine's Lines" and the Titanic's Last Word" classifieds gave everyone a chance to buy a few lines and have their personal quotes and messages published in the paper.

Titans give the Titanic two thumbs up!

In all, 1997-98 has certainly been the year of the Titanic. A big thank you to all the Titanic staff, especially to our publicity directors, Victoria Yeh and Janet Fong, our public relations representative, Nancy Carlson, and our treasurer, Aisha Yahya. Thanks to Mr. Friesen for putting up with our craziness. We also thank Ms. Ellison for her proofreading, Mr. McNab for his constant encouragement and the Student's Union for their support and funding.

Thank you, Ainlay. It's been a splash. Maybe we'll get that Oscar next year...

Environment Club

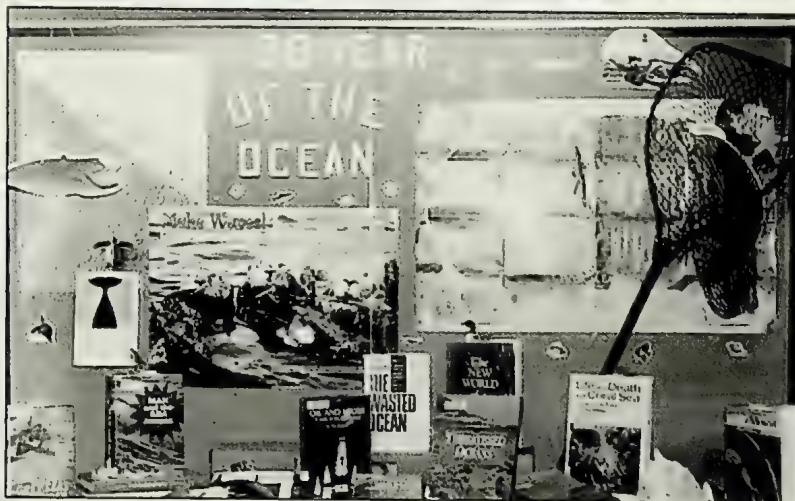

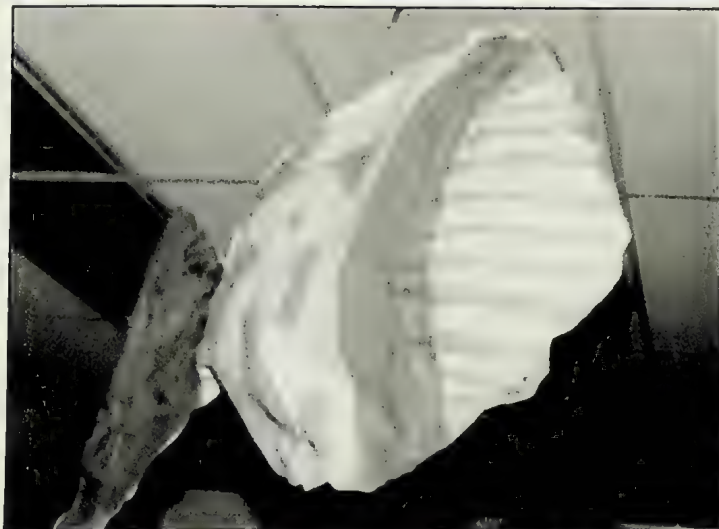

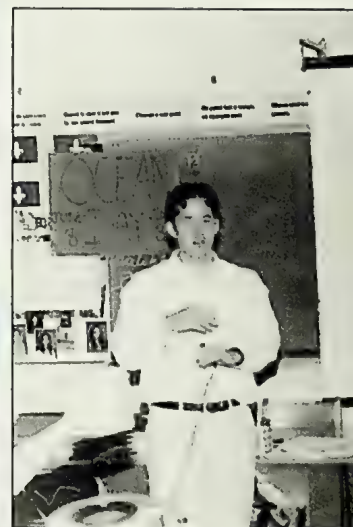

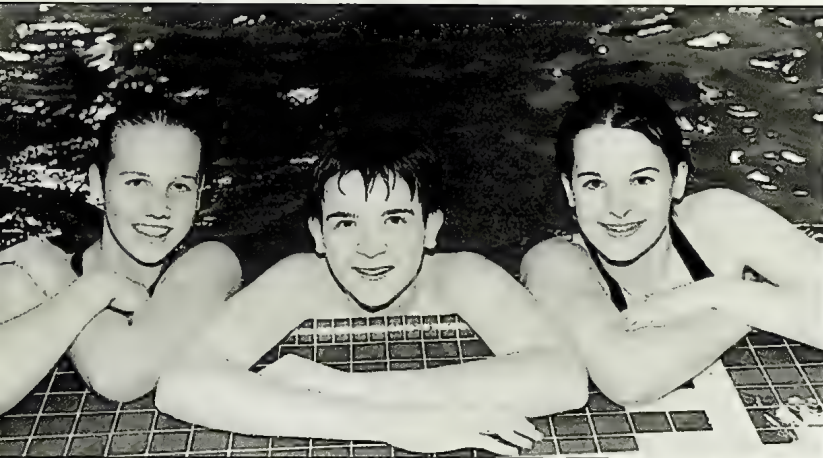

The Environment Club began the year with fundraising work for the World Wildlife Fund. A new format for the school-wide recycling program was also started. Money from these projects has gone to the WWF, the Sierra Legal Defense Association, the Canadian Parks and Wilderness Society, and the Nature Conservancy. The Club also participated in circulating petitions against the Cheviot coal mine, for which some members attended a rally. In the spring the Club celebrated Oceans Day and an interesting presentation about Atlantic-coast whales. Special thanks this year to Mrs. Tayler, Mr. Riddick, and Mr. Hignell. Also, many thanks to Ms. Wyllie who has given so much of herself over the years to increase awareness of our environment.

Sports

The strength of Harry Ainlay is shown in many ways. Earlier in the book you had an opportunity to look through Titan eyes at the curricular areas available in the school and explore the diversity of clubs which students participate in.

Athletics and sports offer yet another view of Harry Ainlay strength. Harry Ainlay hosts a major volleyball tournament in the fall and a basketball tournament early in the new year. These events attract students from all across Western Canada. On a more local basis, students have opportunities to participate in scuba, badminton, swimming, golf, tennis, ping pong, wrestling, weight lifting, water polo, rugby, soccer and curling.

The pages which follow will capture some of this athletic diversity. Through Titan Eyes, enjoy the athletics and sports activities which are part of Titan strength and pride.

The season started with the team's success tied to returning Edmonton City All Stars Laura Ramsay and Kelly Barrett. We went into the Christmas break with an 11/2 win/loss record. Following back to back tournament championships at Salisbury and Vic's RIBT, Laura developed a stress fracture in her foot, which eventually would end her season in the team's 15th game. Kelly Barrett continued her strong performance and was assisted by the offensive and defensive play of Alanna Widgiz and Natalie Lutzak. The Titans spend most of the new year ranked 3rd in Alberta due to the improvement of new-found starter Krys Knutson and the excellent defense of Kalina Davidiuk. After winning Ainlay's 25th annual Tri-Prov, the team finished league play at a perfect 12 wins and 0 losses. Steady performances off the bench by Lauren Jantzie and Leah Mortimer, the improved play of our starters, and Kelly Barrett's MVP play gave Ainlay it's 7th consecutive Public School League Championship with a convincing 19 point win over the McNally Tigers. The Titans headed to the Provincial Championships at 32W/4L and ranked 4th in Alberta. A tough 3 point loss to Bishop Grandin put us on the consolation side. After victories over LCI and Hunting Hills, a sick and injured Ainlay team lost a gutsy game to O'Leary to finish 6th in the province and end our season at 34W/6L. Coaches Bryan Anderson, John Huot, and Erin Anderson are very proud of this years teams.

Laura Ramsay and Kelly Barrett were again named to Edmonton Journal's Edmonton High School All Star team.

Summary for Men's Teams

The Junior Men's team experienced a very successful season. The team won gold medals in each of the junior tournaments they entered - Salisbury, Titan Classic, and Lindsay Thurber. The Junior Titans finished first in their league with a 12-0 record. The season peaked at the end with the Junior Men winning the Premier City Championship, defeating W.P. Wagner 3-0.

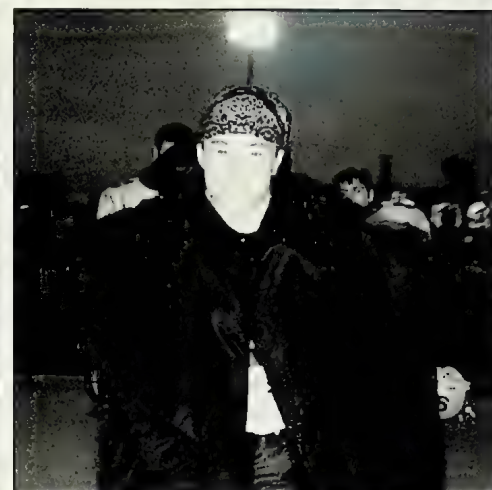

The Senior Men's team was also very successful this season. With only four players returning from last year's Provincial Championship team, the '97 season was predicted to be a rebuilding year but with the addition of some young, talented, junior players, this year's Titans continued the winning tradition. Competing in four tournaments, they were 4th with U. of A., 1st with U.B.C., 4th with TVT, and 2nd with Salisbury.

In league play, the team had a regular season record of 12 wins and 2 losses and won the City Championship for the third year in a row.

Throw that rock!— Ainlay Curling

For the 1997/98 curling season Harry Ainlay had four teams entered in the Greater

Edmonton High School Curling League: two senior boys, one mixed team, and one junior team. GEHSCL had over fifty teams registered from Edmonton and surrounding area schools. League games were played on Tuesdays at three curling clubs: Shamrock, Ottewell and Thistle. A special thank you is extended to the teacher directors who have spent many hours in organizing this league. Two of Ainlay's teams were trophy winners in the league playdowns. The senior boys team with members Mike Kotyk, Colin Topolnitsky, Tom Griener, and Mark Pannekoek were the consolation round (B event) winners in the senior boys division. The junior team consisting of Jeff Bissonnette, Neil Hounjet, and Alex Fung won the consolation round (B event) of the junior division. Thanks to all curlers for a successful season and to all parents for their support, and to The Derrick Golf and Winter Club for providing the teams with practice ice. In the Edmonton Zone Curling Playdowns two of Ainlay's teams also achieved a measure of success. The Junior team skipped by Jeff Bissonnette won silver medals in the Edmonton Zone junior. Congratulations to all members of the Ainlay team!!

Badminton/Cross Country -Look at that birdie fly!

Wow man! it's the Badminton Club

The 1997/98 Badminton season started early February. A total of seventy-two students tried out for the team. It was a tough two weeks of tryouts, but in the end, twenty-two students were selected (12 males and 10 females).

The playing began in March and it had ended by the second week of April. Harry Ainlay had an impressive season, winning 51 out of 60 games. Upon completion of the regular season, the team went on to win the City Championship beating Stratford and J. Percy Page in the finals.

The team should be commended for their efforts. Throughout the season, the players showed their Titan pride while being excellent ambassadors for the school. These individuals deserve a 'pat on the back' for the exceptional badminton season that they had. Their pride and desire to compete showed in the standings. Hats off to the team for an excellent season.

Harry Ainlay Men's Golf Team on a Mission

On September 15, the Harry Ainlay men's Golf team, consisting of Kevin Black(12), Ryan Lauber(12) Amit Koshal(11), and Scott Charlesworth(10), travelled to Spruce Grove to participate in the Edmonton Zone Golf tournament. When the tournament had finished, in spite of cold and rainy weather most of the day, the team won the championship trophy, with a low gross score of 240 (for the three lowest team members). As well, Ryan Lauber finished tied for first in the individual competition with a fine 76, under miserable conditions. After a two hole play-off, Ryan was declared the city champion, and received the gold medallion. As a result of the team victory at the Edmonton competition, the team travelled to Bonnyville, to participate in the provincial championships in September 26 and 27. After the first round of the two day competition, the Ainlay team was in first place with a gross score of 236, led by Kevin Black with a 77. On the second day, the weather conditions deteriorated, and the Ainlay team was unable maintain their lead, finishing second by one stroke to Hunting Hills from Red Deer. Ainlay's top golfer at Provincials was Amit Koshal, with two identical rounds of 79.

Events

Each year we are the hosts of a great many activities; inside the school, out in the community, across the province, and even across Canada. We are proud to be Titans.

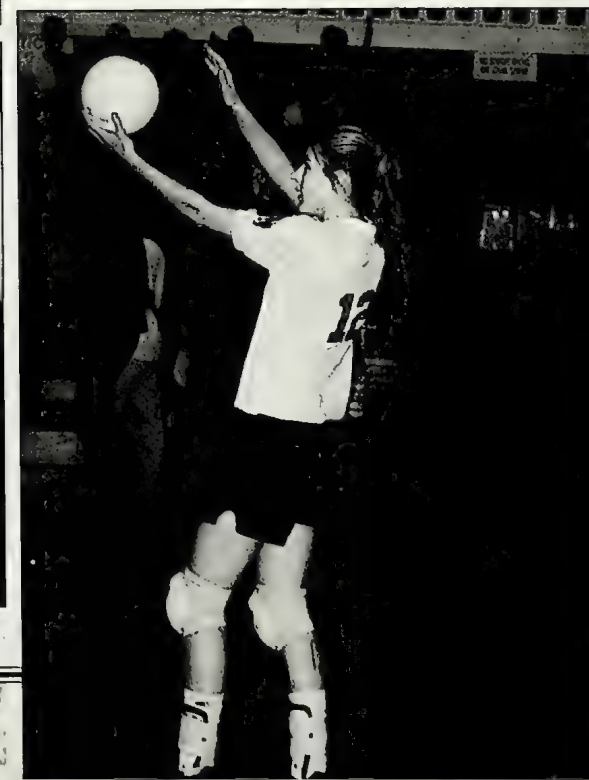

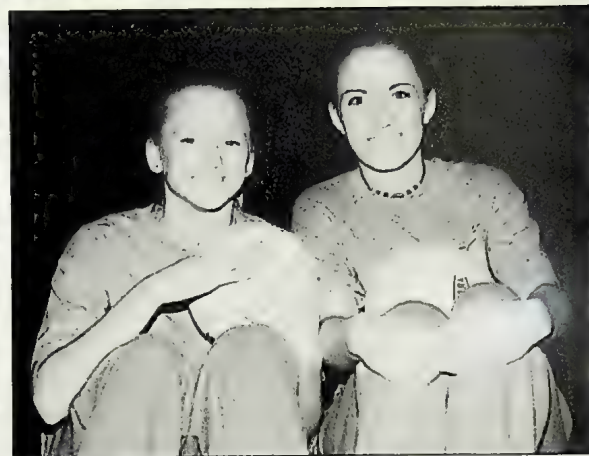

Volleyball Anyone?

The crowd is cheering the ball is flying. It's volleyball season! Since the spring of last year, TVT executives have been toiling shamelessly to plan the events of the 1997 Titan Volleyball Tournament. Even if (God forbid) our teams didn't win, everyone was going to have to enjoy themselves, or else face the wrath of stressed out executives, and over-enthusiastic players on the rampage. By the surprisingly low post-TVT bodycount, we assume that everyone had fun.

The first notice that the general population takes of TVT are the numerous posters in the halls, and perhaps the loud obnoxious people on the PA, advertising opening ceremonies. They don't realize the consistent effort that was required to transform those three days in October into much more than just an ordinary weekend. Even the mural, a single, (though not minute) aspect of the tournament, required phenomenal effort from everyone involved-Including the 6-long hours spent perched on a ladder the night before the games, desperately trying to plaster the massive thing to the wall. And let's not forget the teams, without whose continuous quest for superiority in the sport of volleyball, we would have neither need nor desire to hold this prestigious tournament.

The tournament was not meant just as a mere excuse to miss class, or to catch up on the sleep that you missed at home, while resting comfortably in the bleachers. It was to be an exhibition of skill and ability of athletes from various schools in Western Canada. Among the teams present, in addition, of course, to our own Harry Ainlay "Titans" were: Bishop Grandin "Ghosts" (Calgary), Campbell Collegiate "Tartans" (Regina), J.Percy Page "Panthers" (Edmonton), Louis St. Laurent "Barons" (Edmonton), Mennonite Brethren Coll. Inst. "Hawks" (Winnipeg), North Peace "Oscars" (Fort St. John, B.C), Salisbury Composite "Sabres" (Sherwood Park), and Austin O'Brian "Crusaders" (Edmonton).

Unfortunately, our teams did not win. And despite their effort, they just couldn't face the might of the Louis St. Laurent "Barons"; newcomers to our tournament, they proved their strength in both men's and women's games to eventually take both championships. And yet despite our own loss, the Titans returned at the finals to cheer on the very team that had knocked them down. Ainlay proved its sportsmanship and its refusal to be kept down. One enthusiastic host who shall be kept nameless (It was Mike!) even paraded around the school as the Louis mascot to show his support. Ahhh....the memories. We are lucky then to have a school where such things can happen.

25 th Annual Tri - Prov Tournament

Senior Women's

The Harry Ainlay Senior Women's basketball team went into Tri-Prov '98 ranked 3rd in Alberta and sporting a 19 & 2 win/loss record. The team had risen to the challenge, defeating #2 ranked O'Leary in the final of the RIBT the previous Saturday. The big win was unexpected considering that Laura Ramsay had been out of action for 5 weeks with a stress fracture in her foot. Laura was last season's Edmonton MVP and when she was injured had an 18.7/PPG average. The team certainly came together to pick up the scoring loss. Alanna Widgiz came to play every game raising both her offensive and defensive stats to a consistently high level.

The Titans team defence leading to the Tri-Prov '98 final had been outstanding. In game after game the opposition was held to significantly fewer shots attempted than they had been used to. The final game against a fiercely but young Duchess Park (Prince George, B.C.) team started as other games had, with Ainlay jumping out to a 16-4 lead. Tough Titan defence and poor Duchess Park shooting had Ainlay with a 16 point half-time lead. However the Condors started the second half with renewed vigour, much better shooting and a combination man/zone defence designed to take play away from Titan point guard Kelly Barrett, to this point clearly the tournament's most effective player. The Ainlay girls appeared confused and certainly unsettled allowing Duchess Park to close the score to four points with 5 minutes left in the game. Game outstanding defensive plays by Kalina Davidiuk and Alanna Widgiz, a couple of clutch shots by Natalie Lutzak and Barrett's regained poise finally brought the game back under Titan control and gave Ainlay a 50-38 championship win, their first since 1993.

Harry Ainlay hosted the 25th Tri-Provincial basketball tournament on February 12-14th. The girls and boys teams proved to be challenging hosts. The senior boys have won 10 of the last 13 tournament titles. The senior girls last won the title in 1993 and have been runners-up three times since then. Last year they were defeated by Jasper Place by only one point.

The girls' final game commenced at 5:45 on Saturday and they played against Duchess Park of Prince George, B.C. They maintained a dominant lead in the first half which eroded to within two points in the second half. However, with skill and determination, they began taking a significant lead once again and won with a score of 50-38.

The senior men commenced at 7:30 and provided end to end excitement for the entire game. They maintained a strong lead and frequently popped in 3-point baskets.

Both teams showed determination, skill, discipline and focus. Although half time breaks found players wrapping tensor bandages, placing ice packs and displaying bruises, their drive was unquestionable. The support of Ainlay teams was evident with standing room only attendance at the finals. Well done Titans!

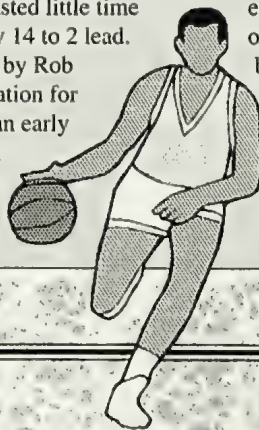

Senior Men's

Who could ask for a better match up for the championship final of the Senior Men's Tri-Prov? The number one ranked Titans met the number two ranked Magrath Zeniths in a much awaited game between the southern and northern Alberta.

The Titans wasted little time by jumping to an early 14 to 2 lead. Strong defensive play by Rob Hirsche created frustration for Mike Card who took an early personal and technical foul. The 6'9" University of Montana prospect exited the game and never returned following further disciplinary action by coach Brad Sabey. Despite the loss of Card, there was little doubt in the minds of the Titan supporters that the Titans would prevail on their home court.

With the full support of the packed, enthusiastic crowd the Titans dominated throughout the game with all 11 players seeing action before the half. Constant pressure resulted in numerous Zenith turnovers and the home crowd had lots of reason for celebration. In the end, a 87 - 58 victory resulted in the fourteenth tournament championship by the Titans in the 25 years of Tri-Prov history.

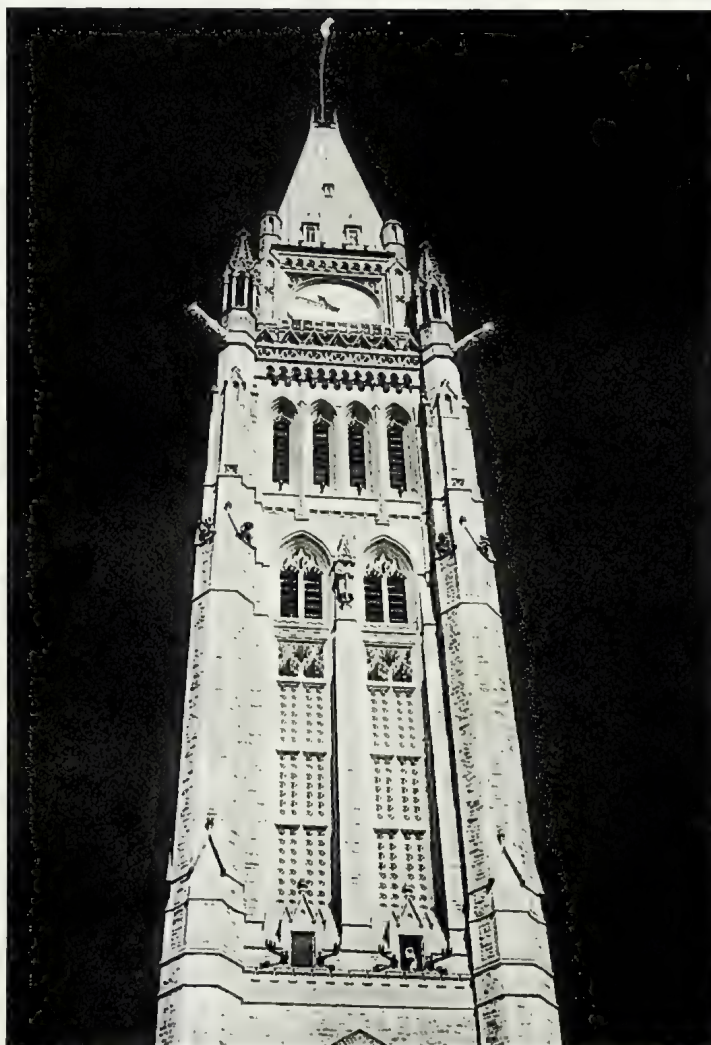

Encounters With Canada

The Encounters with Canada experience was one of the years best times for me and the other participants. The opportunity to see our nation's capital and to learn about sub themes was great and of equal importance, many new friendships were established.

I find there is a lack of words to explain how fun the trip was. We learned a lot and got to experience an exciting part of Canadian politics.

Though there were about 10 students that went and just as many themes, I am going to talk about mine due to the fact I am in yearbook and I too went to Ottawa with Encounters. The theme I chose was journalism due to the fact that I am in yearbook and that theme directly relates to the production of our book. The other students that participated in the program had a choice as to what sub theme they wanted to participate in. Each theme is scheduled for different times of the year and consequently most of the students from Harry Ainlay did not see each other in Ottawa because most of us chose different themes and went at different times. Students who went chose from the following themes: Sports and Fitness, Science and Technology, Law, Royal Canadian Mounted Police Forum, Journalism and Communications, Business and Entrepreneurship, Canada and the World and Canadian Experience.

Buddy Night

Junior high students may think that their junior high school is very big. Well...think again. Ainlay has got over 2000 students, bigger than many towns in this province. So it is no wonder why junior high students may start to think that high school will be a nightmare the minute they first go into one.

Buddy Night gives grade 9 students from various junior highs an opportunity to see what high school life is all about. It provides an them with information about how to survive high school, and even shows them the many options available at this school.

For all the grade 10 students who went to Buddy Night last year, we bet you are thanking yourselves.

Open House

One of the nice things about an open house is the fact that people can find out what some place has to offer. The 1998 Ainlay Open House sure showed what Ainlay has to offer. Throughout the school, Ainlay students showed what Ainlay is all about.

student volunteers helped to guide new Ainlay students of next year, as well as their parents, the various facilities in this school. Within the classrooms, there were many different things to check out. Some of these activities include: science experiments, art drawing, hairstyling, preparing food, computer programs, and the list goes on.

In the end, this open house was a success. It shows what Ainlay is all about.

During this evening, Ainlay teachers as well as

JB New York Trip

Manhattan was: "Broadway Rent", "The King and I", "Grease", "Bring in da noise, Bring in da Funk", and "Les Miserables", the Empire State Building, Statue of Liberty, Ellis Island, World Trade Tower, Washington Square, Rockefeller Center, Guggenheim, Metropolitan Museum of Art, the U.N., New York State Exchange, Strawberry Fields, Central Park, Macy's, Tower Records and Ben and Jerry's Ice Cream.

It was also walking, walking and oh yeah, more walking! Mrs. Tuffs and Mrs. Voyce always a block ahead of the students. Alanna looked like a genuine New Yorker; Elizabeth couldn't get enough salt or T-shirts; Natalie and Elizabeth took pictures of the homeless people. Lynn and Lucy stayed up till midnight and laughed at 4 of Norm MacDonald's jokes. Jennifer, Anna, Elizabeth, Alanna, and Natalie read HS, New York's most interesting magazine. Thanks to everyone involved in the New York trip. It was a blast.

Culture Fest

Just glancing at these photos will give you a good idea of what Culture Fest '98 was about. The purpose of this festival was for Ainlay students to gain an awareness of the many cultures that exist within Canada. After three months of phoning, faxing, panicking, rehearsing dancing, cooking exotic foods, and finally exclaiming "only one more day left!" we successfully organized an educational and very entertaining festival. During the four day lunch hours of March 9-12, the Rotunda was the main focus of many students' attention. While many watched the "world" unravel in the form of dances and demonstrations, others sampled the delicious treats and took part in several activities; who would have thought that you could have been a contestant on Jeopardy... well, Cultural Jeopardy (but thick enough). From admiring the Ethnic Fashion Show to being amazed by the Tae Kwon Do demonstration, Culture Fest '98 had it all. If you did not get a chance to join the party, don't fret - make sure to mark it down on your calender next year!

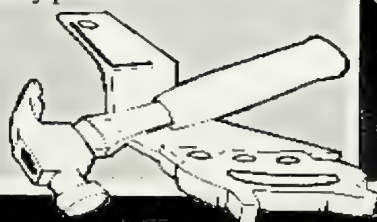

Skills Canada Competitions

Friday November 7, 1997 at 9:30 am sharp the big yellow bus left Harry Ainlay with a load of brave, bright and enthusiastic students. They were headed for the ACT Centre in Rundle park for the Skills Canada card board boat race. We had four teams representing our school, and they were up for the challenge. We arrived in time to check in, weigh in and jump into the event. Each group was given two pieces of card board, string, an x-acto knife, duct tape, pencils and contact cement. They had one and a half hours to build their boat according to the plans they had previously drawn up. The boats were then judged on their exactness to the plans, durability and uniqueness. After lunch the students proceeded to the pool where they raced against the clock from one end of the pool to the other. Some sank, some tipped, some stayed and some flew past everyone. Cardboard, thongs, paddles and other items were often seen floating behind the racers. After the race, each team went to the "float tank" and tested the boats floatability as well as the amount of weight they could hold.

After all the events and towling off, the students headed back to the gym for the door prizes and awards. One of our teams, #34, the construction crew, came in 5th place. The others came in close behind with cheers of joy.

It was an awesome, wet and wild event. Lots of laughs and well worth the effort. Congratulations to the participants. They did Harry Ainlay proud.

Competitors in Skills Canada

The following areas are listed along with participants in the event from our school: Baking: Cindy Sherrard and Amanda Handley.

Buisness Computer Applications: David Baboneau (bronze medal winner). Spreadsheet: Shaun Weber (gold medal winner).

ComputerAnimation: Nicholas Paulfer and Vinay Gidwaney. Cullinary Arts:

CarrieSmeall and Larissa Zilinsky. Desktop Publishing: Sarah Lai (Silver medal winner)

and Rick Povaschuk. Fashion Studies:

Leanne Martin and Janell Baker. Ladies

Hairdressing: (Gr 10-11), Cathy Ta and Sylvia Tang. Website Design: Daniel Irving and Travis Holownia.

Grad Fashion Show

Well, the big day is almost upon us - GRADUATION! In preparation for this big event, Grade X11 students have been busy making preparations. Who is that special person I am taking on my graduation evening? What is the latest in men's fashion? What is the latest trend in women's formal evening wear? Will I have that special dress that I am making in Fashion Studies ready for graduation? What is everyone else planning? The Grad Fashion Show helps get students prepared for the graduation ceremonies. As can be seen, Ainlay models proudly 'strut their stuff' to the pleasure of everyone in attendance.

President's Message:

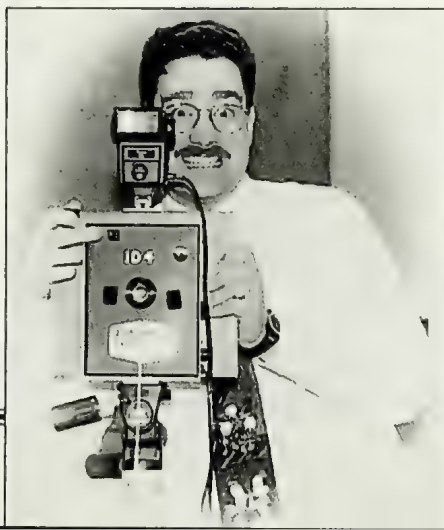

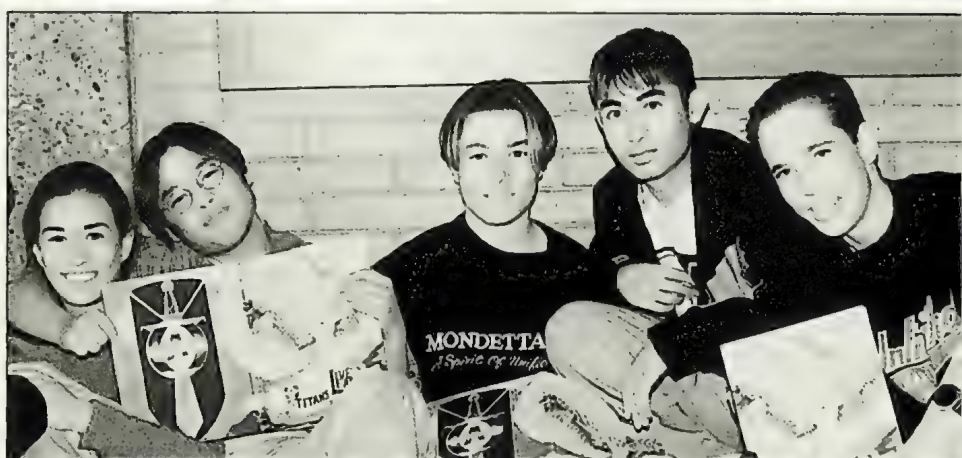

The months of the school year have passed by in a flurry of academics, activities, arts, and athletics. For some of us, another challenging year at Harry Ainlay awaits, while for others, the new challenges of university, college, travel or work are already looming large on the horizon. Harry Ainlay staff provided us with the opportunity to expand our knowledge and try new experiences. However, it was the students that truly made our school year so incredible. Magic moments like TVT and Tri-Prov, the band concerts, the drama productions, and many more will live on in our memories and in this yearbook. Friends made through shared interest... or because we couldn't do our Biology homework, have become a part of our lives, and will always be a part of our Harry Ainlay experience. Thank you to all the students and staff at Harry Ainlay who made my last high school year so rewarding. Thank you to the Students' Union who worked diligently at making the school year so successful. This yearbook allows us to experience again the good times of our high school experience. Keep it, cherish it, and remember with fondness the memories it holds.

The Students' Union has continued the tradition of providing excellent leadership skills to a multitude of young Titans. Hardly a noon hour went by without some form of activity taking place in the rotunda or gymnasium. As can be seen in these photos, there was always something going on to provide student involvement. The traditional Halloween pumpkin carving contest always draws attention from everyone. Western days activities also draws in the 'country folk'. Yearbook involvement, basketball, clubs.... the list goes on.

Madame president, honoured graduands, staff parents and guests. It is my distinct pleasure to address the Class of 98, the 32nd graduating class of Harry Ainlay High School.

Graduations are high points, watersheds, if you like. They are points that give us perspective from which to look both forward and back. Tonight you look back to the road travelled through the last 12 years of schooling. During that time, you have rapidly increased your understanding of the world. This will be a life long journey. Recall if you will, that far off day when your parents first sent you off to kindergarten or grade one. How long ago it all seems to you, how short a time to your parents. How much change has occurred in the intervening years. How much you have changed both mentally and physically.

For some of you, formal schooling began in the neighbourhoods close to Harry Ainlay, for others it began in places elsewhere in Canada, and yet for others, it began in countries and cultures quite different from those that surround us in south Edmonton today. Whatever your educational beginnings, public education brings us together. Harry Ainlay has brought us together and given us a shared experience that after tonight will become a memory.

Harry Ainlay is a microcosm of the modern Canada. Bold, strong, young, dynamic, active, exciting, culturally diverse, constantly redefining itself; but always defining itself as a place that values the hard work and perseverance that is required for meaningful achievement. You have each benefited from and contributed to what is the Ainlay experience. In my first meeting with you in the fall of 1995, I said that whatever you are is what Harry Ainlay will be. I believe this is born out in the nature of school climate and culture that we see in the hallways of Ainlay today. You are a serious, hard working group who put student achievement in a perspective with balance, humor and basic humanity. You understand the importance of maintaining the human connection and the dedication to service to lead and build positive bridges throughout the community.

This class has been active in the multitude of functions that make the high school years busy, active and fun. This class has made a major contribution to developing habits of leadership extending service through work in the junior high schools. But this class has also been active in extending the hand of leadership and assistance to those less fortunate than themselves with their service to three different inner city schools, their service to the food bank, and to senior citizen homes throughout south Edmonton. One thinks of the recent successful Blood Donor Clinic and other good works such as warm clothing drives for the less fortunate. These are clear messages that this is a class that not only has the skills and talents to work in their own interest, but the compassion and determination to make a direct contribution to the betterment of the community.

In my own reflections, I see that during the last three years you have experienced a good deal of the range of what life has to offer - and you have experienced it together. For good or ill these three years are part of your common heritage. To some extent, Ainlay has made its mark on you, and you have impressed your mark on it.

Together with the staff, you have planted - and shared - the seeds of thought, of reason, of respect, of hope, of optimism.

Together you have reaped - the rewards of hard work - of challenge - of dedication - of perseverance - of honesty - of increasing confidence - of tolerance - of understanding.

You have shared laughs together - and at times you have shared tears, sometimes separately, and sometimes together.

In all that you have done together, your intention has been to accentuate the good and the correct, you have learned to confront the evil, the harmful, and the hurtful. That you have not always succeeded, that at times you may have misunderstood, or been misunderstood, is itself part of education, and you must draw from it what lessons you can.

You have learned to dance and celebrate your similarities and your differences together.

You have learned that there is a time to mourn. No class spends three years together without a share of tragedy visiting some and affecting many. One thinks at a time like this of lessons in personal courage exemplified by Peter Jang whose bravery was such an inspiration to this class.

You have put aside a few illusions of childhood because the late teenage years, and therefore high school, is where you must adjust to the realities of the adult world. And you are still in that process.

But, most of all, during these years, you have out together the basic fabric of the young adult, and you will continue this process, with other mentors, in other contexts, and under other influences - and that is the excitement of the future. For while a part of this evening is about reflection, another part is about looking forward.

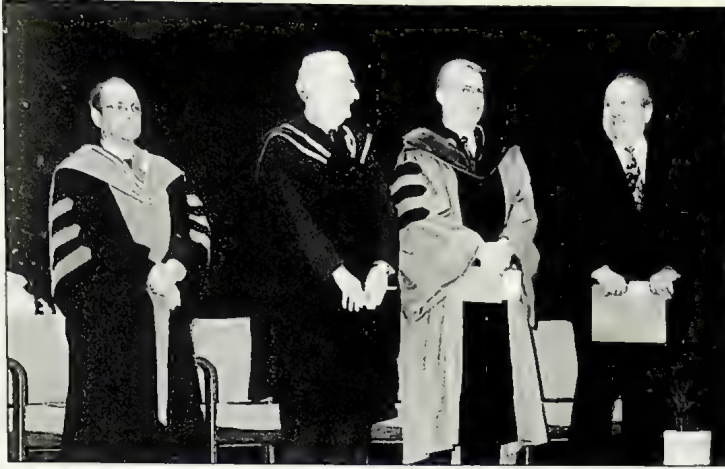

And it is to the future that I now turn. Your theme this evening is Live the Dream, and from that I have every faith that you will make your dreams a reality. American poet Carl Sandburg said, "Nothing happens unless a first dream." The Ainlay experience has given you what it can. You must carry on from here. We believe it has provided you with one of the top academic preparations in western Canada, it has given a wealth of experience in meeting, working and playing with the citizens of 21st century. It has given great opportunity and fulfillment in fine arts, work related experiences, athletics, and service to the community. It now remains for you to go your separate ways and exploit the potential of that broad educational experience.

Speaking on behalf of the staff at Ainlay, we have certain wishes for your futures - we wish you much love and friendship, no casting of stones, no war, much peace, and a great deal of purpose. May you always dream dreams in sunshine and good fortune, and may you always "Live the Dream."

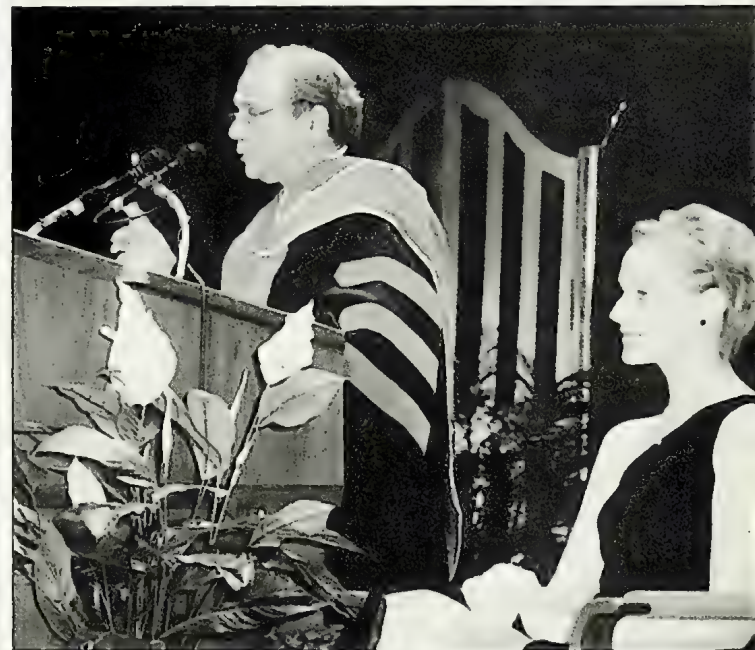

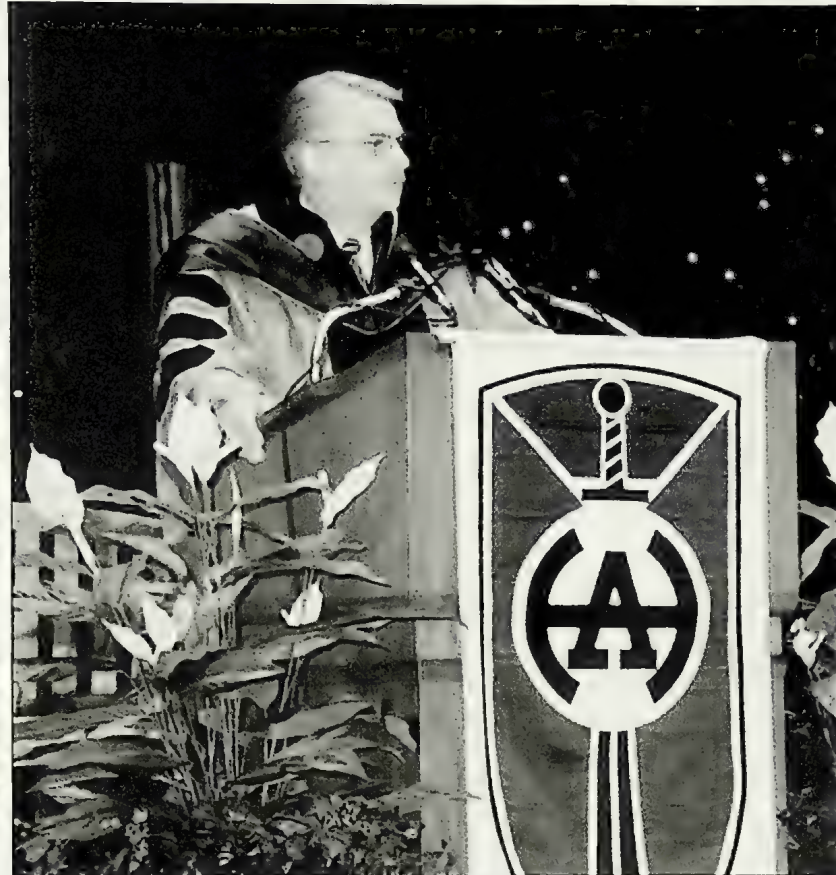

~Mr. M. Demaine, Principal

Presenters

Commencement 1998 was filled with laughter and joy as each presenter shared an experience or blessing with the graduating class. Whether it was an amusing anecdote or a life lesson, each graduand was left with a bright outlook of the years to come. From the motivational blessing to the handing out of the final diploma, it was a time to be enjoyed by all. Some speakers included Mr. Demaine, Principal of Harry Ainlay High School, Mr. G.P. Nichololson, Chairman of the Edmonton Public School Board, Mr. E. Dosdall, Superintendent of Edmonton Public Schools, and Dr. S. Ramsankar, former principal of Alexander Taylor School.

Dr. S. Ramsankar received a standing ovation for his provocative presentation giving everyone a perspective on what is really important in life. Having been a principal of an inner city school in Edmonton for over two decades, he developed an inner appreciation of the good that mankind has to offer. He stressed that before we can be of value to others, we must first have basic necessities like food, clothing and shelter taken care of. He then emphasized that we must feel good about ourselves and in so doing, we will shine on the lives of others. Everyone was asked to take a moment and talk to those sitting next to them. The positive energy generated was electrifying. He then made an analogy to different colored balloons and people and the fact that it is not the color but what was inside that allowed one to soar to great heights.

Class Historians

Offstage

We are the best kept secret at commencement. Our mission - to monitor student activity at Harry Ainlay High School. We are your best, last, and only form of entertainment this evening. We work in secret. We exist in shadow. And we dress in black. 'Men In Black' (MIB) Theme Song

Bill: Good evening ladies and gentlemen, parents, teachers. We welcome you to commencement 98'. Let's start this speech off by explaining about grade 12 and how grad was coming up.

Dean: And with Bill being on the grad committee he mentions that the position for class historian is still up for grabs.

Adam: We knew that the people needed to do the job right had to be responsible...

Bill: ...Well rounded...

Dean: ...Politically correct...

Adam: ...Humorous...

Bill: ...multi-talented individuals who played crucial roles in all school activities.

Dean: We then realized that we were none of these things. Needless to say our incompetence did not discourage us.

Bill: So we took out some paper and a pen and came up with a 10 minute oral blessing were are about to give you now. I'm Bill Farrell, you can call me Billy.

Dean: I'm Dean Hitesman, you can call me Deano.

Adam: And I'm Adam Elwi, you can call me Elwi.

ALL: And we are your 1998 Class Historians!

Bill: Now I didn't join the Titan team until grade 11 so I'm turning it over to Dean and Adam who are going to tell you about grade 10.

Dean: First day of high school, every one remembers their first day. You're all slicked up with the dippity-doo in your hair and you've thrown away the teenage mutant ninja turtle sweat pants your grandmother gave you last Christmas and slipped into the Bugle Boy jeans you picked up at Wal-Mart for $9.95. Needless to say looking pretty sharp minus the acne farm on your face. So you wheel into the student parking lot with your mom, slide back the mini-van door and have a look at your new school. Just as you are about to exit the van you hear that familiar nagging voice.

(Bill grabs Deans Ear)

Bill: ('Mom' voice) Hey, where are you going, you almost forgot my morning kiss.

Dean: No mom, I'm in grade 10 now and were not going to do that anymore, it's just not cool.

Bill: O.k. then 'Mr. I'm 15 years old - doesn't need his mother to make sure he's got his shoes tied - his hair combed nice and neat.' Now Dean you have that top button on your shirt done up? Hey is that a Witch over by the door? Now do you have your crucifix on?

Dean: Mom, the morning rides are done!

Bill: Well there is no need to get smart with me young man. We will talk to your father over dinner about this!

Dean: Just give me my 80 cents and I'll take the bus.

Bill: (Aside) I think he's hitting that puberty stage.

Adam: Hey Dean, Is that your mom over there?

Bill: Hey Dean son, you forgot your lunch. I even made you tuna.

Dean: NO! NO! NO! I was adopted.

Bill: (returns back to normal) Hey Dean, it's a really big school, do you have your map?

Adam: Now like Dean, all grade 10's have to come to terms with the school map which has got to be the most degrading thing at Ainlay. I guess that the office had a fluorescent pink paper surplus that year had to print the map on it. So now your going down the hall sporting your fluorescent pink map which says to everyone "Hey! Look at me! I'm the new guy! I'm lost!" But with the aid of the map you make your way to Science 10. Good old Science 10, where we would soon learn the motto for all labs throughout our school careers - "If it doesn't burn, break it."

Bill: So you get to all your classes okay, but seriously, where are the washrooms? It's a good thing that they smell like a rose garden or else we'd never find them.

Dean: Now we got a lot of good clubs at Ainlay...

Adam: ...Chess Club...

Bill: ...Computer Club...

Adam: ...Math Club...

Bill: ...William's Sailor Moon Club...(slide of William MacBeath holding a Sailor Moon Poster)

Dean: And last but not least, the Environmental Club. Now don't get me wrong, I don't have anything against these kids, they're donating their lunch hours to a worthwhile cause. Now I sign their petitions and help them out when I can and I love saving trees and all but I don't remember signing the "let's put no toilet paper in the washroom" petition. (Slide of empty toilet paper roll) It's a good thing we got all those useless Math notes over the last three years. And some people say Math doesn't serve a purpose.

Bill: But that's like everything you learn in High School, it all comes in handy in the end when were all writing those diploma exams in the gym. You know the ones with just you, your paper, a pencil, a calculator and buddy on the intercom. (New teacher voice) Now we need absolute silence in here. There'll be no talking, keep your eyes on your own sheet, and should the occasion arise that you need to use the facilities, just raise your hand. I'll be by to take you by the hand and lead you there. I know it's a two man job!

Dean: Now there is one course that has moulded me into the man I am today. They call it Career and Life Management. (Slide of CALM door) I think I speak on behalf of the entire student body when I say that cancer video really touched me somewhere special. Don't you agree Bill?

Bill: Yes Dean, it did give me a lump.

Dean: In your throat I'm sure. Speaking of cancer, our school has a serious smoking problem. Here's a little re-enactment. (Slide of Exit 11)

Dean and Adam stand off to one side and pretend to smoke. Bill comes up behind them...

Dean: Good smoke, heh?

Adam: Oh beautiful, beautiful, just beautiful...

Bill: (Teacher voice) Excuse me gentlemen. No! No! No...Step back about 3/4 of an inch onto the grass please. Now, you gentlemen are probably looking at me thinking this guy's on a power trip. I tell you, I was once young and cool. I did experiment with the cigarettes and peeling out of the parking lot to impress the ladies, and from time to time, I used to get jiggy with it. We're not talking about getting jiggy with it gentlemen, we are talking about omnibus excelsior. Now your probably wondering what that means...Well, I don't know. I don't speak French. That's beyond the point though: the point being that smoking is not cool. (Slide of Library) Now school is cool.

Dean: So you butt your smoke and head to the library. Sure enough its a ball game in there, 3 strikes and you're out. So you sit down with 4 of your buddies and your studying, right? You're studying hard not disturbing anyone and along comes the "Regulator."

Adam: (Librarian Voice) Excuse me boys! You know I am getting older and I must be seeing one of you here is double, because I swear I'm seeing five of you at this table and I know you guys wouldn't want to be breaking the four to a table rule. Now let's count together now...#1, #2, #3, #4...and what do we have here?...#5! And just what do you think you are doing here son?

Dean: Oh! I'm sorry. #2 was just helping me with my Math.

Adam: I don't believe you! Do you know what you just did? You just broke the most sacred rule at the library, the "Be Quiet Rule."

Dean: But you just asked me what I was doing here so.....

Adam: Don't get smart with me boy! You have no idea who your dealing with. And what's that in your pocket? Is that a granola bar or are you just happy to see me? Either way you're breaking some sort of rule. I think that's food. Now you've got three strikes, you're going for some sort of record here. Heh! Hold on! What's that you're hiding under your feet? Is that a backpack? I know your type, trying to pinch off my books aren't you? That's four strikes boy, I haven't seen anything like this since back in '69. As a matter of fact, I think you just struck out the whole table! Get out of here you juveniles! You boys take a look at those IB's over there, model library students, a pleasure to have them.

Bill: Yeah! Those IB's hey! (picture of Adam in the library) You'll never find five of them at one table because they have a maximum of three friends. But I guess I'd only have three friends if I wore flood pants to school. One day I had to tell this one kid: "Hey buddy, why don't you tell your mom to bring down the hem a notch. It looks like they hurt."

Dean: Now us in the regular program may not know how to add fractions, or go to class, or how to wash properly, but I will tell you one thing, we do know how to dress, especially those ladies that wear those tight black pants.

Bill: But what is going on with the tie-dye at the school store? Now what kind of moron would wear that junk? (Slide of Bill wearing tie-dye shirt from school store)

Dean: However, there is one article of clothing that is desired by many. Those of course are the elusive football jackets.

Adam: Now I've heard that they're pretty pricey but it's a good investment when you've got five years of high school ahead of you.

Dean: These things are so nice that when it's 30 above, they're still wearing them. Now after your fifth year of high school, I think that everyone knows that your name is Wayne and you play tight end and your number 39. We were city champs 12 years in a row and we haven't won a game since Center High recruited our vets.

Adam: Now when these football guys get into these jackets, all of a sudden they've gained 70 pounds of pure muscle. (Dean and Bill bump into each other)

Bill: OH! Sorry man!

Dean: (pointing at jacket sleeves and talking in a macho man voice) The name is Wayne! Tight End!

Bill: I'm sure you are. Well Wayne it looks like you've been here awhile. Could you tell me how to get to Social 23?

Dean: Who's this? I don't know him. Doesn't play football that's for sure. Probably one of those pansy swimmers prancing around in the little speedos with the fruitbasket!

Bill: Never mind. How about Automotives 10?

Dean: Yeah! I just came from there. I'm gonna set you up with a little play that I learned from a certain statistician Walker. Now what you wanna do is run a red line slant 50 deep. Then cut right to the post then throw a pick and roll at the water fountain, then you got daylight, now get down! (Bill assumes the position) HUT! HUT! (Bill runs up the front of the stage)

Bill: Even though our athletes aren't the brightest people, they're a bunch of good kids. We got some great sports at Ainlay. With volleyball and basketball come TVT and Tri-Prov. Now let me be frank with you people...

Dean: Am I still Wayne?...

Bill: You do whatever you want back there. I don't know who is shortstop on the football team or hooker on the rugby team. But you get me out of class and I'll be roaring from the bleachers, just like my buddies over here...

Adam & Dean: Ainlay! Ainlay!

Bill: No guys, they're not playing right now.

Adam & Dean: Scona! Gaylords! Scona!

Bill: Actually they're not playing either guys.

Adam & Dean: Well who is playing then? Gotta cheer for someone! Hey this is better than the Syphilis lesson in CALM.

Bill: Well I got Bert Church and Vic-Comp.

Adam & Dean: BERT! CHURCH! BERT! CHURCH!

Bill: You've been a great crowd tonight and we are more than proud to be a part of the '98 graduating class.

Adam: We wish you all the best in the future...

Bill: Take care of yourselves...

Adam & Dean: ...and each other.

ALL: Goodnight ladies and gentlemen from your 1998 class historians!

The Titan Tradition yearbook again becomes a reality. As of May 03, 1998, 71 pages remained to be completed. However, most of these were already in progress and only needed to be 'tweaked' to make them informative and visually attractive to the eye. On June 19, Ken Heathfield appeared and hauled all the pages away completing another year of dedication on behalf of many talented students.

Aisha Yahya appeared in April and spent countless hours to complete the entire grad mug pages. This required weeks of work to sort photos and then match quotes with graduates. Thanks Aisha.

Then there was Tara Grayson who offered to take on the Grad and Commencement pages and make them representative of the events. Again, coming in without being prompted, she completed 12 pages. Wow - what an effort!

In the second semester, Monika Jaworska appeared as a lover of photography and was everywhere capturing the pulse of Ainlay. Grad, Awards, Commencement, track and field, soccer, rugby, Battle of the Bands, music concerts, the list goes on. Not only did she cover the events, she developed most of the film! Her keen eye and awareness of the 'decisive moment' resulted in many key photos that you are now enjoying in the book. Thanks Monika. May Karout, Melina Massimo and Glory Wright also spent countless hours completing darkroom work.

Tianna Mapstone and Rick Povaschuk, our co-editors, put on a sustained effort throughout the year to keep everyone on track. They started the year during August when they attended a workshop in Regina sponsored by Herff Jones. At this time a ladder and a theme was established. They also attended a one-week trip to Ottawa to study journalism as part of an Encounters With Canada program. Their efforts are apparent in the great yearbook layout.

Others like Derek Yip and Sarah Lai also put in a continuous effort throughout the year. Sarah even won a silver medal in desktop publishing and went on to national competitions in Vancouver. Thanks for your continual support and we look forward to more involvement next year.

Mr. Povaschuk
